The Greater Lincoln Business Resilience Forum

The University of Lincoln Business Continuity manager would like to invite you to a free meeting hosted in the new Enterprise@Lincoln building on the University's Brayford Pool campus.

During the meeting a discussion will take place to investigate the potential for a Greater Lincoln Business Resiliency Forum. This Forum could be hosted and chaired by the University of Lincoln.

Potential benefits to be realised by the establishment of such a forum could come in the form of:

- Potential income generation
- Improved Value for Money
- Better local options for resiliency contracts/assistance
- An environment within which to openly discuss and develop knowledge on business continuity and resiliency measures
- An environment within which to undergo business continuity exercises and to test your plans free of charge
- An environment within which to discuss and understand the measures provided by our local civil emergency category 1 responders e.g. local authorities, the emergency planning unit and emergency services and category 2 responders e.g. utility companies, plus assess how those measures will assist you and your organisation.

The free meeting will take place on 29th April 2010 in the boardroom of the Enterprise@Lincoln building, starting 10am for 10.30am and concluding with a buffet lunch at 12.30pm. Refreshments will be provided on arrival.

Please contact Lynda McMullan via her email lmcmullan@lincoln.ac.uk to register your interest, stating any dietary or access requirements.

Please respond by Wednesday 21st April 2010. Thank you
